Airtel Extends Outsourcing Deal with IBM Till Jan '20

Telco said to be in talks with tech co for a new contract with narrower scope and lower value them told ET- IBM's existing five-year contract — which was to expire on March 31 — was worth $500-550 million.

The proposed change in Airtel's outsourcing model stems from its multi-vendor IT outsourcing approach at a time the operator continues to face financial stress in an ultra-competitive industry, one of the people said. IBM India said Airtel has "continued with the IBM contract past the March 2019 milestone". "From application management services (AMS) to AI, we continue to support Airtel in its digital transformation journey to help them generate more value from their existing IT infrastructure, and provide strategic (high-value) services that are critical to the ir future business growth," the company said in a written response to ET's queries. Airtel did not respond to ET's emailed queries as of press time Tuesday.

The telco had originally inked an end-to-end managed services contract with IBM in 2004. Estimated at $750 million, it was then the largest IT outsourcing deal in India. The two firms eventually expanded that contract with an estimated $150 million pact in 2007 and in 2010 added Bharti's Aircel operations as well. The last contract renewal for five years was transpired in April 2014.
